

PUBLICATION ETHICS AND MALPRACTICE STATEMENT

Scientific Annals of the "Alexandru Ioan Cuza" University of Iasi, new series, History (AŞUI) is a peer-reviewed journal committed to the highest standards of publication ethics in the field. All parties involved in the act of publishing (editors, authors, reviewers) have to agree upon the following ethical standards.

EDITORS

The editor, the members of the editorial committee and the editorial board is committed to maintain the principles of editorial independence. They are responsible for deciding which contributions will be published in this journal. Their decision must be solely based on the academic and scientific value, importance, originality and quality of research. The editors may consult with the reviewers for such decisions. They also take into consideration the policies of non-discrimination, plagiarism, and copyright violation.

The editor, assistant editor, editorial board and reviewers will evaluate contributions on the basis of their content without discrimination of race, gender, sexual orientation, religion, ethnic origin, citizenship, or political orientation of the authors.

The editor, assistant editor, and editorial board will not reveal the identity of the reviewers to the author, or the identity of the author to the reviewers. They will not reveal information on the contributions to be published to other persons. They will be in contact with the authors, proposing solutions for the different situations that have arisen, depending on the reviewers' opinions.

AUTHORS

The author is the only person responsible for the content of his or her publication. The author pledges to have written an original work in all of its parts and to have cited adequately all the scientific publications used in that contribution. Authors must indicate correctly the bibliographical references mentioned in the contribution. In case of reproduction of sources (images, photos, maps and so on), they will obtain the necessary authorizations. They must also have the consent of the interviewees in the case of oral history research.

Authors must ensure that the manuscript has not been published elsewhere. It is unethical for authors to submit a manuscript that is in the process of review elsewhere. If the contribution is written by more than one author, the author who sends the text must guarantee that there is the consent of the co-authors to publish the contribution in the journal.

Authors have to provide retractions or corrections of mistakes, if required by the editor. The financial support, if present, will be mentioned in a note in the contributions. Authors must declare any potential conflict of interest.

REVIEWERS

The procedure of peer-review is of great importance in allowing the editor, assistant editor, editorial board and reviewers to decide on the contributions to be published or not and to offer authors the opportunity to improve their contributions.

Reviewers will not discuss the contribution they are required to review with other persons. They are required not to accept to peer-review contributions in case of a conflict of interest due to previous collaboration or competition with the author involved.

Reviewers agree to review papers for which they have the expertise required to carry out a proper assessment and which they can assess in an objective and timely manner. They must provide adequate grounds for their evaluation. They must inform the editor if there are similarities between the contribution being reviewed and other publications known to them. They must consider all information obtained during the peer-review process as confidential. They will not use information obtained during the peer-review process for their own or personal or organizational advantage, or to disadvantage or discredit others.

Plagiarism in all its forms constitutes unethical publishing behavior and is unacceptable. We do not tolerate plagiarism in this publication, and we reserve the right to check all submitted contributions through appropriate plagiarism checking tools. The contributions containing suspected plagiarism, in whole or part, will be rejected.
